MINNEAPOLIS, May 7, 2009 – Terra Andina, Chile's innovative, premium wine producer, today announced that its Suyai 2007 was awarded 93 points by The Wine Advocate, Robert M. Parker Jr.'s influential wine review. The wine, which means "hope" in Chile's native Mapuche language, is a robust blend of Cabernet Sauvignon (40%), Cabernet Franc (40%), Carignan (13%) and Carmenère (7%). It will make its U.S. debut at the Wines of Chile event in New York City on June 3, 2009. Available nationwide in the fall of 2009, Suyai 2007 will retail at the suggested price of $40.

In a recent issue, The Wine Advocate published the following about the Terra Andina Suyai 2007, including: "Saturated purple/black in color, it has a nose of brooding black fruits, tar, and licorice. Powerful, dense, and full-flavored, the wine is surprisingly well-balanced and very long in the finish."

"We spent several years experimenting with different grapes and multiple blends in order to find the perfect combination that expresses the terroir of the Andes, particularly the Colchagua Valley," said Oscar Salas, Master Winemaker, Terra Andina. "Our Suyai 2007 represents the best of the vintage and it embodies our hope that each vintage will improve. It's gratifying that it has already received critical acclaim from the highest level."

"To have Robert Parker's seal of approval is an enormous boost and we are extremely proud," said Chris Haroza, U.S. Brand Manager, Terra Andina. "Terra Andina represents good value at all price points and our Suyai 2007 is no exception. We are delighted to offer something memorable and in keeping with everyone's budget."
